Purpose of the manual

This manual provides content that can be shared with parents to support playful interactions for children 0-36 months. The manual was developed in response to the Covid-19 pandemic and the suspension of many programs that involved home visiting or parent groups. It does not require parents to have previously participated in such programs, and could be used in other situations when traditional delivery of parenting programs is not possible.

The content comprises selected play and language activities from the Reach Up programme (www.reachupandlearn.com). We have chosen activities that require few materials and where materials are needed, they are simple to make and use items that parents often have in their homes. The content is provided in 3-month age groups. For each 3-month group we have chosen 6 play and 6 language activities. If a parent does not have the materials needed for one activity, they can choose another one. All of the play activities include talking about the actions and the language ones involve playful interaction. Many can be done as part of everyday routines such as eating, bathing and while doing household chores.

The manual is in 2 parts. The first part is for program managers and comprises this section (‘Purpose of the manual’) and tables with activities that can be used to provide content for delivery to parents by various media including radio, phone calls and social media formats.

The second part (Activities we can do at home with baby) provides the same activities in a format that can be used directly by parents. It can be printed and distributed to families (as a whole or using cards with content for different age groups). The content could also be delivered through SMS or WhatsApp or via radio and TV.

The content for parents is in two sections:

The first section provides some guidelines for parents on how to use the manual and some general information on how to help children feel safe and happy.

The second section comprises the activities formatted for use by parents and instructions to make a few toys.
Adaptation

Program managers may need to adapt the content and format for their situation, considering things like parent literacy and materials typically available in the children’s homes. It is particularly important to adapt for parents reading ability. Although we have formatted the content as a manual this delivery format will not always be suitable, and other options such as radio or, cards with more pictures and few words could be used. The songs and examples given can be changed and additional examples given if appropriate for the cultural context.

While we have selected activities with few materials, we encourage the distribution of a few items if feasible, such as picture books, crayons, blocks and soft doll.

For a sample of related parenting videos that was successfully implemented in health centres in the Caribbean see link and password in Chang et al. (2015) available here: https://publications.iadb.org/en/parenting-programme-health-centres-what-you-do-baby-really-matters-implementation-manual

Evaluation

The activities included are taken from the evidence-based Reach Up program. However they have not been delivered in this way before. It is important to have evaluation of the process (e.g. uptake by parents, how often they used it, what activities did they like and use often, were there activities that they did not use and why). Impact evaluation would also be very helpful where possible. We would be happy to participate in the planning or conduct of evaluations. Contact us at info@reachupandlearn.com

Activities we can do at home with baby
How to use these activities

• Playtime is very important, play is how young children learn.

• The activities are things you can do at home with your child.

• First we talk about things that you can do every day to help your children feel safe and happy.

• Then play activities are shown by age group, for example 6 to 8 months. Pick the ones for how old your child is.

• Try doing one activity playing with objects every day and another one with talking or singing.

• You may need to use one or two objects in your home. If you do not have them, see if you can think of something else to use, or just choose another activity.

• Let your child play with the objects first. Then show him the activity. If he does not want to do it, that’s okay. Let him play how he wants and try the activity again later.

• For a sample of parenting videos that you could use as a guide see link and password in publication available here: https://publications.iadb.org/en/parenting-programme-health-centres-what-you-do-baby-really-matters-implementation-manual

• Make time for play every day. Have fun!
Helping children feel safe and happy

Children need someone who

➢ shows them love
➢ they can trust to care for them
➢ listens to them and understands them
➢ responds to what they are interested in
➢ talks with them
➢ plays with them

Here are some important things you can do to help your child feel loved, safe and happy.

Show Love
Showing them love makes babies and children feel happy and secure.

• pick them up and comfort them when they cry or are sad,
• stroke or rock them,
• kiss and hug them.
• tell them you love them.

Have Routines

• Routines help children feel safe.
• Have a routine for bedtime. For example, bath, cuddle and look at a book together or sing a song.
• Try to also have a routine for the day, such as resting and eating meals at around the same time each day, it doesn’t matter if you cannot always do this.
Talk with your children and listen to what they say

- Pick baby up, look into his eyes, smile and talk softly and coo to baby.
- Listen for sounds he makes and make the same sound back or a new sound.
- Talk with your baby or child often.
- Talk about what you or baby are doing. Talk about things and people in the home.
- See what she is interested in and tell her about it.
- Listen to what they say. Answer him every time he talks.

Praise your child

Children love to be praised it makes them feel good and behave well.

- Praise your child often
- Praise him when he behaves well and when he tries to do something.
- Say what she did that was good. It will make her want to do it again. For example ‘Good girl you showed me the spoon’ OR ‘What a smart girl, you waved bye bye.’

Sing with child

- For older children try counting songs, or nursery rhymes.
- Have fun and sing everyday with baby
Looking after yourself

It is important to take care of yourself. Being kind and patient with yourself will help you stay calm and be kind and patient with others.

Here are some things you can try:

- Keep in touch with family and friends, with a phone call if you can’t visit.
- Try and rest when your child is resting, and try to get enough sleep at night.
- If you feel stressed or angry take some long deep breaths.
- Take short breaks. Get a glass of water or cup of tea and sit somewhere to drink it. Find things that help you relax and smile, maybe a funny TV show.
- Limit how much you listen to the news if it is upsetting.
- Tell family members or friends how you are feeling. Don’t be afraid to ask them for help so that you can have some time for yourself.
- Before you go to sleep try and remember something your child did today that made you smile or feel good. Think of things that went well or people who were kind to you.
